Miss Rose Bormet of Tinley Park Again Champion Milk Maid

Tuesday afternoon before a crowd of 3000 people attending the Pure Milk Association annual picnic in a grove near Troy, Miss Rose Bormet of Tinley Park retained her title of Champion Milk Maid by milking 19.8 lbs. of milk from a Holstein cow in 3 minutes. She won the Milk Maid Championship in the Milk Maid contest here a year ago, in conjunction with the annual picnic of District 13 of the Pure Milk association. Her record this year was not as good as her last year's record, but was almost 2 lbs. more than Marion Jones of Minooka could acquire from her cow in the same period of time.

Miss Margaret Cario of Blue Island took 3rd place by milking 16.4 lbs. Little Marion Christensen of Frankfort was 4th with 12.6 lbs., Laura Boehman of Joliet, 5th with 10.9 lbs., and Phyllis Jones, sister of Marion, 6th with 9.2 lbs.

Earlier in the day the New Lenox Flashers girls beat the New Lenox married ladies on the soft ball diamond.

Because they wore trousers and were not handicapped by dresses, Lucille Schilling of Orland took first prize and Lucille Laufer of Mokena took second in the slipper kicking contest. Gail and Kenneth Penning of Homer proved the best egg throwers and the Koppelmans succeeded in throwing the egg the next farthest without breaking it. Millie Taylor and Lucille Laufer were first and second respectively in the rolling pin throwing contest.

Other winners were as follows: Race for boys under 10; Leon Zeismier of Joliet, first; Jerry Yack of Joliet, second. Race for girls under 10; Norma Wilhelm of Joliet first and Margaret Wilhelm of Joliet second. Race for girls under 15; Irene Woodcock first, of Mokena; Rose Keifner, Joliet, second. Race for boys under 15; James McDonald of Joliet, first and Kenneth Pennington of Plainfield second. Men's race, Robt. Budd of Manhattan first. Ladies race, Elma Schilling of Tinley Park first and Valdeine Seimmons of Mokena second. Prizes were furnished by Joliet merchants and the Pure Milk association.

Mokena Resident Makes 8,000 Mile Automobile Trip

Mrs. Frank Hirsch, Jr., of Mokena returned last week from an 8000 mile automobile trip through the southwest, west and northwest states covering the following states: Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, South Dakota; Minnesota, Arizona and Old Mexico.

Mrs. H. J. Deuter and two sons of Chicago, the former being the daughter of Mrs. Hirsch, drove all the way. The famous redwood forest in California, the Washington figure at Rushmore Mountain, S. D., the earthquake ruins in Helena, Montana the famous marble pools and casino at Caliente, Mexico were among the many wonderful and interesting sights seen. The party also had the privilege of being aboard a battleship while the fleet was in the harbor at Portland, Oregon.

The trip took seven weeks and no trouble was encountered with the exception of one flat tire caused by picking up a nail in South Dakota.

Mrs. Hirsch's sister, Mrs. Wm. Stanley of California returned with the party and will remain for the winter with Mrs. Hirsch.

Mokena will have to come to the front again on the Wolf road. With the completion of the connection with the Lincoln Highway, Wolf Rd., must be carried on southward to connect with Route 45 or better known as Route 51. It is now up to those interested in the further extension of Wolf Road to take the matter up with the state highway department or perhaps the Mokena Business Men's Association might lay the matter before Rep. Lottie Holman O'Neill and Rep. Warren Wood for legislative action.

Cash Prizes Boom Mokena Trade

The weekly cash awards made by the Mokena Business Men's Association every Saturday night continue to draw good crowds to Mokena. Last Saturday night an exceptionally large crowd was in town. The first prize remained unclaimed so this Saturday night the first cash prize will be $30 with $5 for the second prize.

The last Saturday night in this month a new series of prizes will be awarded so as to give more opportunity for winning these cash prizes. Four prizes, $10, $5, and two $2.50 prizes will be awarded. These new prizes will help to bring much more trade to the Mokena business places. On Saturday night Mokena is quite a live town and considerable shopping is done here. Where a year ago maybe one or two cars were seen parked along the streets on Saturday night, now it is hard to find a parking space on Front street in the heart of the town.

Donkey Ball Games Popular

Donkey Ball appears to be the latest sport which is sweeping the local communities. These games are played with the players riding donkeys and with one of the players in center field leading a billy goat around while trying to retrieve the ball if it comes in his direction. The players often have a trying time with the donkeys, some being balky and others being very skittish and they will throw off any rider who attempts to get on.

The Donkey Ball game between the Mokena Business Men's Association and the Mokena Fire Men held on the Hayden field in Mokena last Friday night drew a big crowd. The game waxed fast and furious but the fire laddies finally nosed out the business men with a score of 5 to 4.

A crowd estimated at several hundred people attended the donkey ball game between the married men and the single men held at the Tinley Park ball park Wednesday night. The game was a nip and tuck affair and resulted in a tie, the score being 4 to 4.

The game created much merriment and everyone attending was well pleased with this form of entertainment.

Will Hold Art Sale and Program At Oak Forest

One of the outstanding events of the summer is an Art Sale and program which will be given Friday, August 28, beginning at 6:30 p. m., in the M. E. church, Oak Forest. Mrs. H. W. Christensen, public welfare chairman of the Forest Ridge Womens club has planned a program and sale of Arts and Crafts which have been made by the inmates of the Oak Forest Infirmary.

The clubs in Third District I. F. W. C. under the guidance of Mrs. Kasehagen 9338 S. Aberdeen street, district chairman inaugurated Occupational Therapy at the Infirmary. They have given them whole hearted support in supplying material and assistance in addition to a full time instructor. The articles which have been made are being sold at this meeting at a nominal cost; proceeds of which are used to purchase supplies and to pay the patients for the articles they make, thus giving the unfortunate individuals a small amount of money. This work is outstanding and serves a most excellent two-fold purpose.

All civic and religious organizations of Chicago Heights, Homewood, Harvey, Blue Island, Mokena, Tinley Park, Orland Park, Palos Park, Midlothian and Crestwood are urged to attend.

A program consisting of music, dramatics and talks has been arranged by the program committee of the Forest Ridge club with the president Mrs. M. S. Ramsey in charge. Mrs. Mildred Nelson soloist will render several numbers. Dramatic readings will be given by Mrs. M. A. Hall.

Frank Venece, superintendent of Oak Forest Institution will speak, as will Dr. George C. Carawell, Pastor of Oak Forest M. E. church and Rev. A. Klein, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran church. Mrs. Kasehagen will tell an interesting story with pictures of the work she and her chairmen are doing. Refreshments will be sold the proceeds from these will be used to help toward the erection of a community club house at Oak Forest.

Dr. George Carawell, pastor of the M. E. church feels it an honor and a privilege to assist and support in this worthy project.

National Union To Picnic at Frankfort

The Chicago Heights unit of the National Union for Social Justice will hold a big picnic and rally at the Frankfort Grove on Sept. 13th. More particulars later.

Mokena To See Completion of Wolf Road Hookup Soon

The Powers - Thompson Construction company of Joliet who have the contract for paving Wolf Road from Hickory Creek bridge south to the Lincoln Highway have started moving their road building equipment to Mokena. An additional spur is being laid to connect with the side track near the depot. The clam shell shovel has already arrived and the balance of the concrete mixing machinery is expected to arrive here within a few days or the forepart of next week.

At present the grading work is nearing completion. A deep fill thru the Cleveland timberland has been requiring the most work. Earth has been hauled in, wetted down and then packed down with a heavy roller. By using this method it is said fills do not have to be left idle for months waiting for the earth to settle.

Fills have also been made to the approaches of a large culvert spanning a small creek in the McCord woodland. A number of hills have also been cut down to provide a level grade. Another good sized fill runs through the Cleveland farm close to the Cleveland school. Here the Wolf Road will be three feet higher than the school yard.

The McCarthy Construction company has been at work for weeks cutting down a hill near the Cleveland school and filling in the low spots and leveling the Lincoln Highway so as to make the intersection of Wolf Road with the Lincoln visible to cars coming either way on the Lincoln Highway and thus doing away with a very dangerous spot which formerly existed between two hills. The improvement work on the Lincoln Highway extends from the Warning farm west beyond the Owen hill to a point where Lincoln Highway was improved last fall with a new black top and a two foot addition to the width of the pavement.

After all the grading work is finished, it is estimated that the paving of the Wolf Road will be finished in about ten days.

The repaving of the Lincoln Highway will follow. It is estimated that Mokena will be the center of much activity for at least the next two months. All the road building material will be hauled here by the Rock Island railroad.

Just how long it will take before the Wolf Road and the Lincoln Highway will be opened for traffic has not been announced. Paving of the Wolf Road to the Lincoln Highway ends a seven year fight on the part of the Mokena Wolf Road Boosters to get a connection with the Lincoln Highway.

GUNLOCK RANCH

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tambel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tambel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge.

The noon train from Medicine Bend brought a few more visitors to the Fairgrounds. These made just about a load for Jim McAlpin's bus. To one Medicine Bend man, Jim paid particular deference, calling him frequently by his first name, but doing most of the talking himself all the way from the depot, for his friend, like most sporting men, was spare of words.

But the moment McAlpin's favored passenger had paid his fair, tipped the Scotch liverman generously, and walked toward the grandstand, McAlpin confided to those about him that this was the celebrated Harry Tenison, big-time gambler from Medicine Bend, who talked of opening a place in Sleepy Cat.

Sawdy and Lefever were in moody confab behind the grandstand when the dapper Tenison approached, picking his steps with disgust through the dust. Sawdy's eyes lighted on the new arrival first. He gave a great start.

"Harry!" he cried. "For the love o' women! Of all men you're sent this minute from heaven."

"How much is this goin' to cost, Henry?" asked Tenison, pausing to dust his shoes with an immaculate silk handkerchief. Lefever, too, beamed on Tenison.

"Harry!" he shouted. "For the love o' Mike, how come?"

"Two of you," commented Tenison calmly. "The clouds are gatherin'. I supposed you've been cleaned by this Sleepy Cat bunch and want me for a pay-off."

"Harry," murmured Sawdy, lower-voiced and very sober, "I'll admit I couldn't have said it better myself. Come this way. Talk low."

The three found a quiet spot back of the grandstand. The story of the cowmen was soon told. It went into sympathetic and unhesitating ears. As with all gamblers who play big, Tenison's mind was soon made up. "I don't bank much on sure things; but you two seem to know what you're talkin' about. How much do you boys want?"

"A thousand, Harry."

Tenison thought a minute. "Is Jake Spotts in town?"

"Here on the grounds, if he's not up at the saloon."

"Hunt him up. He'll have a few hundred. I've got a few in my pocket. Where's the boy that pulls this stuff for you?"

"Come over to the horses and meet Bill Denison. We're keeping him dark. They think he's a hostler."

Tenison, when introduced, looked over Sawdy's hope in his usual cold-blooded fashion. Jake Spotts, the profane barber-shop-and-bar magnate, appeared meantime. Tenison asked for six hundred dollars. Jake counted his roll. He showed four hundred odd. "Give me the four, Jake," said Tenison calmly.

"I can get all you want up at the bar, Harry," suggested Spotts, thin, tall, bald-headed, hollow-jawed, and hollow-eyed.

"There's no time to make the trip, Jake," interposed Sawdy, nervous. "The races are pretty near over, and the trick ridin' comes next."

"No matter," interposed Tenison. "I'll borrow a couple hundred from Harry Boland."

"Why, Boland's backin' the Gunlock outfit."

"All the better. I'd just like to double-cross the . . ."

Within the next five minutes he was talking to Boland. "What's next on the program?" asked the Medicine Bend gambler after the preliminaries.

"Trick ridin'," said Boland.

"Chance to pick up any money on it?"

"Sure, if you can place any money. Bet on McCrossen, ridin' for Gunlock."

"The rustler?"

"Hell, he's foreman at Gunlock now."

"I suppose Van Tambel wouldn't feel easy if he had an honest man stealin' for him. All right. If you say it's McCrossen, lend me a couple of hundred, Harry. I'd like to make my fare up here, anyway."

Boland counted out two hundred dollars and handed it over. Tenison handed half of it back to Boland, "Put this on McCrossen for me—I'll see if I can place the rest on him myself. Who's ridin' against him?"

"Two or three buckaroos. The Circle Dot outfit has entered a young fellow—we'll clean 'em, same as we did yesterday," predicted Boland.

"I heard about that—suckers will always fall for it, Harry. Well, I'll go over and talk to Sawdy and Lefever—see if they got any money left—maybe I can get a small bet."

Boland was fat and short. He never breathed easily; but he would not have been able to breathe at all if he had heard the next talk between Tenison and Sawdy.

"How does it look to you, Harry?" blurted out Sawdy.

"Like many things have looked before takin'; they don't always look so good after. Here's Jake's four hundred. I'm addin' six hundred—that makes your thousand. I don't know about that cigarette trick. I never saw it done but once."

"Where was that?"

"In Madison Square Garden."

"Who pulled it?"

"A young fellow—a Texan—I didn't get his name."

From the judges' stand came the clang of the bell. The jockeys rode up to hear the decision. When they had ridden away, the announcing judge called for the contestant in the next event—the fancy riding.

Four entries rode up and were checked in. First came McCrossen, Gunlock foreman, tall and spare, long-haired and straight as a statue, riding the identical mare that had taken the Circle Dot money the day before.

Next for entry came a Gunlock brave, accoutered with banded hair in scant Indian fashion. The third hope was a local boy in brave apparel.

The fourth to ride up was the night wrangler of the Circle Dot outfit—not an alarming threat either in looks or in reputation. He rode the horse on which he had been so badly beaten the day before, Lefever's little chestnut gelding. His personal rig was inconspicuous. Having been worn the whole way on the drive from the Rio Grande, wear and travel stain had made themselves sensibly felt on it.

Three judges had been chosen to name the victor—Jim Laramie, a north-country cattleman, himself a rider of no mean ability; John Selwood, a mining man who likewise knew how to ride; and an ex-sheriff, Bill Pardaloe—now a deputy—and who rode like a tub, but matched any man in the mountains as a connoisseur of decent liquor, and who would drink nowhere in Sleepy Cat except Jake Spotts'.

The first test came in Indian-style riding. This meant bareback first with bridle stripped; then with bridle. The Reservation entry was at home in this. It made a pretty picture: the half-naked young brave racing around the track, throwing himself from side to side and backward and forward on his pony.

Pardaloe gave him a hundred points and waited for the next man. The local boy passed out on this test. McCrossen made a splendid showing, but his size was against him for that style of horsemanship.

The wrangler, almost as large a man, seemed able better to twist and wind himself around his gelding. The last time he rode down the course it looked at a distance from the grandstand as if the horse had lost his rider, so completely did the wrangler hide himself on the opposite side.

The judges, at least, decided that no buck they had ever seen ride could hide himself more effectually from a foe—they gave the Texan par with the buck. McCrossen fell a few points under the two.

Wild West riding followed. In this McCrossen made a perfect score. His long, lithe body in action, his perfect ease and his striking garb brought enthusiastic applause. The wrangler, now well thought of, was a disappointment in this test. He got through all the work, but seemingly unevenly and with an effort. He dropped to eighty points, with McCrossen at par. Even the local boy and the Indian passed him.

"Looks like yesterday over again," said Harry Boland, disposed to jeer at Sawdy. "Guess your boy shot his bolt on the first round."

The laugh seemed to bore into Sawdy. "We don't quit yet," he blurted out like one baffled but not beaten, "though I'll say I have seen the boy ride a whole lot better."

"What do you think, Harry?" Boland was appealing now to Tenison, who stood near at hand.

"Looks like the wrangler is through," assented Tenison. Backing then to one side and speaking loud to Boland, he added: "Put that money of mine on McCrossen—he's got the act in the bag."

"Well, better luck next time, Harry," said Boland, resuming his prodding of Sawdy.

"I don't ask any better luck," retorted Sawdy. "My boy is the best rider in this bunch, an' I know it."

"Henry," asked Boland, "have you got any money that says that?"

Sawdy fairly hated the sound of the fellow's sneering voice. "The boy's just havin' an off spell—might be all right next event."

"But you wouldn't bet on it?"

Sawdy looked at his tormentor gravely. "You want a bet, eh?"

"Sounds like it, don't it?"

"What odds'll you give?"

Boland turned to Tenison to laugh. "Here's a man with the best fancy rider on earth and askin' odds on him."

"Askin' odds on him today only," explained Sawdy defensively. "He's just off color today."

Boland sneered again. "An' there ain't goin' to be no trick ridin' tomorrow. That's a fine proposition of yours, Henry."

"I'll have my boy in the saddle tomorrow for any kind of ridin' you name against any rider you name," retorted Sawdy.

"What odds you askin', Sawdy?" asked Boland, dangerously near to a sneer as he questioned.

"On the showin' the boy's made," responded Sawdy impressively, "and only on the chance he can pull himself together by tomorrow, I'm askin' two to one."

"How much do you cover at that?"

"All you can raise."

"Sawdy," snapped Boland, "I'll go you a thousand, two to one."

The judges' bell clanged for the trick riding. Sawdy in consternation rushed toward the stand. "Hold on," he cried throwing up his hands. "Five minutes, gentlemen—just five minutes," he shouted. "My man is changin' his boots. Five minutes, please!"

"Does it take him five minutes to take off his boots?" bellowed Bill Pardaloe. "I can kick mine off in five seconds. Start the ridin'!" ordered Bill, clanging the bell impatiently.

"For God's sake, Bill Pardaloe!" shouted Sawdy, "hold on, hold on—give me at least three minutes." If a wink from the foot of a two-story balcony might be described as stentorian, such was the slow, agonizing wink that Sawdy cast up at the impatient judge.

Pardaloe looked at his watch. "I'll give you two minutes," he said sternly. "Be ready or default!" But both men quite understood that this remark was for public consumption rather than literal enforcement.

Sawdy raced hastily back to Boland, who, in fact, had followed him part way to the stand. "You said a thousand at two to one," panted Sawdy. He drew hastily from his pocket a roll of bills and laid the money in Tenison's hands. "Count that—they're mostly fifties. Now, Boland, put up or shut up."

"Just a minute!" Boland conferred with his cronies—a group of them were already about him. There was a turning sideways, a digging into pockets, an assembling of wads; the thousand was hurriedly put into Tenison's hands.

Boland was excited, Sawdy particularly calm. "Boland," he said casually, "I'm hungry."

"What do you mean, Sawdy?"

"I'm hungry for another thousand, same odds."

"Like hell, I guess."

Sawdy pulled from another pocket a second roll of bills.

"Put up, Boland, or shut up, just's you like."

"Sawdy, I'll bet you five hundred more, even money." It was purely a bluff, but it brought an unpleasant surprise.

"I want to be fair, Harry Boland," retorted Sawdy, "just's you was, yesterday. Put up your five hundred, buddy. I'll cover it."

The words were a blow to Boland. Sawdy's not even pausing to insist on odds as the money went up told him that somebody, somewhere, had loaded something. Sawdy hustled back to the stand and winked anew at Pardaloe. The bell clanged. The contestants rode up. The wrangler now, as Jane Van Tambel saucily whispered to Dr. Carpy sitting next to her, was a symphony in brown, from head to foot—a skeleton brown jockey cap, close-fitting brown jersey, brown jersey riding trousers, and low, soft, brown boots made up his rig.

McCrossen clung to his scarlet sash and silk shirt—nor had the Indian or the local boy changed.

As the riding went swiftly forward and the feats grew more difficult, the boy and the Indian were eliminated.

McCrossen took these stunts readily, the wrangler riding fourth, and easily, in all the tests after him. These two riders seemed indifferent in all the earlier feats. They rode standing, feet first or head first; twirling rifles, turning lightning-like in the saddle to face forward or backward at full speed. The crowd sat bewildered.

With the struggle narrowed to the two seemingly even-matched riders, spectators began to wonder how the contest could be decided. The judges, after conference, asked for a further trial of the familiar feat of picking objects from the ground.

Already these feats had been made a feature and creditably performed. But some word had reached the judges that there might be further possibilities in this field. The two contestants were asked to propose their own stunts, tossing for first choice. McCrossen won. A lady's white handkerchief was dropped, and, riding at speed, turned backward in the saddle, McCrossen picked it from the ground. The wrangler followed suit, with easy result.

Things to Prize

THESE are the things I prize
And hold of dearest worth:
Light of the sapphire skies,
Peace of the silent hills,
Shelter of forests,
Comfort of the grass,
Music of birds,
Murmur of little rills,
Shadow of clouds
That swiftly pass,
And, after showers,
The smell of flowers
And of the brown earth—
And best of all,
Along the way,
Friendship and mirth.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

TINLEY PARK METHODIST CHURCH

Paul L. Hastings, Minister

Only one more of our summer unified worship services for all ages remains. We are sure you will want to make it the best yet. You can do that by bringing the whole family next Sunday morning at 10:30.

The success of our adventure into this type of service has far exceeded our greatest hopes. Our boys and girls are rapidly developing a church consciousness and an understanding of what worship really means. They have entered into these services wholeheartedly, and have been more than willing to have a share in conducting the program. Those adults who have participated in these worship experiences from week to week have had awakened a new faith in the loyalty and fine character of the younger generation. And so let us all together make this Sunday a great climax to our summer worship experiences.

At the adult sermon period we shall conclude our study of interpretations of Jesus by asking the question, "Who was Jesus?" We believe that you will find this half hour period a very stimulating one on this particular Sunday.

Mr. Hastings plans to leave Sunday for a two weeks' vacation at the home of his parents in Denver. He will return to Tinley Park about September 9th.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 16.

The Golden Text was, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases" (Psalms 103:2, 3).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee" (Psalms 84:1, 2, 4).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The evidence of the existence of Spirit, Soul, is palpable only to spiritual sense, and is not apparent to the material senses, which cognize only that which is the opposite of Spirit" (p. 859).

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt again has changed courses on relief. This time he tries G. O. P. has launched an experiment that becomes most significant and interesting because he is trying out in a small way the very heart of the relief proposal contained in the Republican platform.

Without any ballyhoo or any detailed statement, the President has allocated $22,700,000 of Public Works Administration funds for use in direct grants to states and has laid down a formula for use of this money that takes it into the same category as the Republican plan. The President took this action personally. He has not only prescribed the conditions under which the grants will be made but has laid down rules for PWA which will, in effect, bring to his attention any completed arrangements involving these funds.

The program provides that the federal government will bear 45 per cent of the cost, a municipality or county contributing the other 55 per cent out of its own funds, and before the allocation is made definitely, the municipality or county receiving the funds must agree to employ 100 per cent relief labor.

In this manner, the "need for relief" becomes the measuring stick. If the local community is unable to supply only unskilled labor from the relief rolls and the project of construction planned for the community requires the use of skilled labor, it does not get the money. The projects considered to fall within the category of this new experiment include a great many worthwhile construction jobs such as school houses, sewage systems and water systems. The things proposed, therefore, may be said to be of permanent value and to that extent represent a veering by the President to the theory which Secretary Ickes of the Department of Interior always has held, namely, that if federal funds are expended they should be used in the construction and maintenance of permanent improvements.

Although the general idea of this new experiment in relief, new to the New Deal, was practically forced upon the President by the necessity of the present relief mess, it nevertheless represents a return to a method long regarded by many students of the problem as the only way in which relief funds can be properly handled. It places back in the hands of local communities the task of looking after their own destitute and charity cases. The federal government contributes a share of the funds, of course, but it does not boss the job as has been the practice under Harry Hopkins and his Works Progress Administration further than the requirements that relief labor be employed.

As stated above, the plan now on trial constitutes the very heart of the Republican proposal for handling federal relief. The Republican platform calls for "federal grants in aid to the states and territories while the need exists upon compliance with these conditions: a fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of states and local governments; all engaged in relief administration to be selected on the basis of merit and fitness; adequate provisions to be made for the encouragement of those persons who are trying to become self-supporting."

I hear much discussion around Washington that the President's experiment meets the Republican program in every way except as to the second provision which relates to the selection of the administrative personnel "upon the basis of merit and fitness." There are many who believe Mr. Roosevelt has reached the conclusion that there is considerable merit in the contention that unless steps are taken to get relief of the unemployed back into the local communities, it will become an unworkable monster, a Frankenstein.

On the other hand, some of the bitter critics of the Roosevelt administration are contending that Mr. Roosevelt seeks to try out the Republican proposal in this manner in order to demonstrate that it is unworkable. They point also to the omission of the second provision, just mentioned, and declare that the President will use political patronage rather than merit as the means of creating supervision.

While the new method has not been made fully operative so that anyone can see it in full detail, the restriction which Mr. Roosevelt has laid down that only relief labor shall be used is looked upon as providing a means of dodging complete operation of the plan. It is to be noted that the Republican plank does not limit the workers wholly to relief. In making such a restriction as the President has done, it is held in some quarters that there will not be too many communities able to take advantage of the fresh federal funds. The reason for this is that particularly in the smaller communities there is not a great amount of skilled labor. This comparatively small proportion of skilled labor, comparatively small when measured against the amount of common labor, or unskilled labor, available makes it impossible in a good many instances for the smaller communities to obtain money.

The situation is simply this: in the construction of sewage and water systems and most other construction jobs, there is more skilled labor required than will be available in the communities where these public works are to be undertaken. Further, with the pick up in industry, however small it may yet be, the skilled artisan has more chances to get jobs than has the common laborer. In addition, I think it can be fairly said that a skilled worker is of the type to be among the last to go on relief rolls. In any event, he will not go on the relief rolls until there is no other alternative. He is able to earn a much higher rate of pay than is available to him as a relief dote and naturally is not content to remain on the relief rolls longer than is absolutely necessary.

In this direction then, trouble may lie. Possibly some communities will be guilty of seeking to induce skilled workers to go on relief rolls for a sufficient length of time to enable them to carry out an agreement to employ only relief labor. This is a regrettable possibility but it is a very real one.

In all fairness to the President, I think it must be said that he is proceeding on a method to reach communities and unemployed that hitherto have been rather like stepchildren. The big relief projects under the former PWA system, and the Harry Hopkins method of handling relief in some way or other have managed to be concentrated in the great cities. While some persons may be unkind enough to say that the President is expanding his vote-getting machine to the small communities, it nevertheless remains as a fact that the system now undertaken will let some relief dribble down to those who have not had it before. In any event, since it is the Republican proposal and it is being tried out by the New Deal, it is an experiment very well worth watching.

The nations of the world find themselves in one of those peculiar and almost humorous situations that can develop only from the queer quirks of diplomacy. It has not progressed far enough yet for anyone to say what the outcome of this new diplomatic situation will be but it is not devoid, nevertheless, of possibilities both from the serious as well as the humorous side.

It may have escaped general notice that, under Mussolini's orders, King Victor Emanuel is now not only king of Italy but he is also emperor of Ethiopia. He was given this new title immediately after the conquering hordes of Italians had held their triumphant march in Rome and, as far as Mussolini was concerned, Ethiopia had gone out of existence, a dead nation.

Despite the fact that Mussolini would like to have Emperor Haile Selassie known only as a plain Mr. Tafari, most of the nations of the world still are compelled, through treaty agreement, foreign policy or plain desire to consider that Mr. Tafari still has the title of emperor of Ethiopia which he and his ancestors so long bore.

There is, however, this circumstance: since no nation has extended formal recognition to Italy as embracing Ethiopia, no diplomat can be formally received in that capacity. For example, the new Italian ambassador to the United States will come to Washington as the plenipotentiary of the king of Italy and emperor of Ethiopia but our ambassador to Italy, Mr. Welles, will go to Rome when he returns to his post this fall as the ambassador to the court of King Victor Emanuel—nothing being said about Ethiopia.

All of this results from American foreign policy and the foreign policies of other nations who oppose the taking of territory of another nation or race by force. It is a policy firmly footed, as witness the course of all of the nations excepting only Salvador in their attitude toward Manchuria which is now under Japanese control. Salvador recognized Japanese sovereignty over Manchuria largely because it was thereby enabled to consummate a great coffee sale.

Ten men were killed by gas when they entered the Union Collieries' Kathleen coal mine at Dowell to investigate a fire. The bodies were recovered by a mine rescue squad and Dr. C. J. Hamilton, who is a candidate for the St. Clair county board of review, was quoted as relating that he fired at Grissom in self-defense and did not intend to kill his wife. He said Grissom pointed a pistol at him as he approached the parked car.

Household Questions

Custard pies should first be started to bake in a hot oven to set the crust, then the heat of the oven should be quickly reduced so that the custard may cook slowly.

When you have potatoes left over from a meal do not peel, as a cold potato keeps better with the jacket on. If peeled, it dries on the outside and must be trimmed before using, and that is wasteful. Also, an economical way to prepare mashed potatoes is to boil them in their jackets, peel and then mash.

If the chicken is well rubbed inside and out with a cut lemon before being cooked it will make the meat white, juicy and tender.

Brass door knockers exposed to the weather will stay bright and shiny if they are rubbed with paraffin before being polished.

Raisin sauce served on steamed or baked cottage puddings makes a good winter dessert and one advised for children.

When blankets are washed at home do not wring them dry. Instead hang them outdoors on the clothesline to dry.

A SPEECH OF NOMINATION

MOST of the reason for the title of these little stories—The Man Who—is supplied by the orators at political conventions who place the name of candidates in nomination.

Today from the loudspeakers come to most of us convincing talks, startlingly free of modesty, which extol the virtues of this favorite son or that one as his name is placed before convention delegates.

But the most successful of these nominating speeches occurred long before static was a household word. It was made in Chicago at the Republican convention of 1880 by James A. Garfield, and made honestly, in behalf of the nomination of John Sherman.

Its net result was that Sherman failed to win the nomination but Garfield succeeded. So that Garfield, later a martyred President, actually is the man who nominated himself.

Here is how it happened. President Hayes had pledged himself not to be a candidate. When the convention opened it was plain that great efforts would be made to nominate General Grant for a third term. James G. Blaine was a formidable candidate but Grant had been presented in a glowing burst of oratory from Roscoe Conkling, a bitter enemy of Blaine.

Garfield's speech in behalf of Sherman followed Conkling's effort. Instead of qualifying merely as an anti-climax it is described by those who were there as an outstanding oratorical triumph.

Grant, Blaine, Sherman, George F. Edmunds, Elihu B. Washburne and William Windom divided the votes until the thirty-fourth ballot. Then Garfield, whose speech still resounded in the minds of the delegates, received 17 votes.

He immediately took the floor and protested that he was there only in the interests of Sherman, whose candidacy he managed. He was ruled out of order. On the next ballot his strength had increased to 50 votes. On the thirty-sixth ballot, with 399 votes, he received the nomination which his epochal speech had asked for another man.

ORIGINAL STEAM-ROLLER

THE steam-roller may not cover ground with the speed of an antelope, but it gets there just the same.

First of the steam-roller tacticians to appear on the American political scene was the illustrious Marcus A. Hanna of Ohio, whose effective maneuverings behind the scenes still serve as an outstanding lesson in the political primer.

Steam-roller methods of attaining the objective, which in this case was the nomination of William McKinley for President, were first utilized by Mark Hanna in the Republican convention of 1896. And they succeeded.

Hanna had observed the amazing switch of delegates to James A. Garfield in 1880 when the latter was earnestly and honestly pleading the cause of John Sherman of Ohio. Sherman tried again in 1883, this time employing McKinley as his convention manager.

At one stage of the proceedings, the report spread that if McKinley would say the word the strength of the delegates would be thrown to him. He promptly put an end to the movement, his vigorous interruption of the roll-call, for he already had received a vote, ending with a demand that: "No delegate who would not cast reflection upon me shall cast a ballot for me."

Hanna was impressed, as were many others. From that day he moved his support from Sherman, who had been defeated three times, and began to groom McKinley for the presidency.

The opportunity came in 1896. When the convention met, only "regular" delegates were seated. The national committee o.k.'d them, one by one, by the vote of 35 to 15. And it just happened they all were McKinley men.

Newspaper reports of the times describe the proceedings as a farce. But at any rate they were successful for McKinley's principal opponent was courting the southern vote, many of whom could not prove an unbroken chain of party fealty, and therefore were not seated.

The result was an outstanding majority for McKinley on the first ballot, Thomas B. Reed of Maine running a tired second, flattened under the weight of the original steam-roller, today an accepted part of our national politics.

Milk Temperature Bacteria Control

Method of Cooling Needs to Comply With Sanitary Requirements.

By F. C. BUTTON, Professor of Dairy Manufactures, New Jersey State College.—WNU Service.

The only way to control the development of bacteria is by reducing the temperature of the milk. There should be immediate and efficient cooling of milk at all seasons of the year. Cooling is vital, since it is the only way to control the development of bacteria. The method of cooling is less important, provided it meets sanitary requirements.

"While milk may be cooled satisfactorily in cooler weather by the use of water, ice water or mechanical refrigeration is needed in summer because water temperature rises with weather temperature.

"Milk sours quickly at 70 degrees Fahrenheit or above. The souring bacteria grow well between 60 and 70 degrees and there is some retarding of growth between 50 and 60 degrees. There is definite retardation of growth at 50 degrees or below and milk held at this temperature will keep fresh for 86 hours. Since dealers cannot use milk which is high in lactic acid, or almost sour, the producer must prevent his milk from being rejected by the market by keeping it below 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Recent tests made at the New Jersey agricultural experiment station showed that when milk with a bacteria count of 10,000 per cubic centimeter is held at 32 degrees Fahrenheit, it takes a month for it to become sour, but if it is kept at 60 degrees Fahrenheit, it will sour in 53 hours. This is just a case in point to show how temperature control affects milk cooling.

"Besides prompt and efficient cooling, sanitary cooling methods, sterilized equipment and clean, healthy cows are important in keeping the milk supply free of bacteria."

Overfeeding Brood Sow Causes Pigs to Scour

Overfeeding the brood sow causes sucking pigs to scour, and this retards their growth, says E. F. Ferrin, swine husbandman, Minnesota university farm. He warns farmers to watch their young pigs closely for symptoms of this disorder.

"On the first day after the sow farrows," he says, "she should receive nothing but warm water. Beginning on the second day with a small amount of wheat bran or oats, the amount of this feed should be gradually increased until, in two weeks, the sow is on full feed. Corn is too heating to be fed during this period.

"If the pigs begin scouring, reduce the sow's feed one-half and add a small handful of epsom salts to the slop. Give each pig, also, a teaspoonful of mineral oil. Provide dry pens and bedding, since these help to prevent scours, especially in cold, rainy weather."

To Get Rid of Lice

To get rid of lice that infest the dairy herd, the following remedies, says the North Carolina State college, have proved effective: (1) a 4 per cent solution of creolin applied with a spray pump or brush; (2) cotton seed oil and kerosene, equal parts; (3) ground sabbadilla seed and flowers of sulphur, equal parts, applied in powder form. There are also several standard dip solutions on the market, but when these are used, directions on the container should be closely followed. Oils should not be used in very warm or very cold weather. When powder is used the hair should first be clipped from the affected parts and the powder applied only on the clipped places. A second treatment should be given within 15 days.

Rivers That Steal

Streams in Ohio are stealing soil at the rate of one farm a day—the fertile top six inches from 174 acres, according to estimates made by erosion experts. Measurements made of the mud carried by the Muskingum river at Zanesville, Ohio, during the nine-day flood in August, 1935, showed that the river carried off topsoil from 2,600 acres, enough to fill a freight train 480 miles long. At 50 cents a ton for soil, the river stole $1,050,733 from Ohio farmers. We aren't much for statistics, but when put in terms of farms and dollars in this way they do make you think, especially when you know that the same kind of soil robbing is going on all over the land.—The Country Home.

Farmland in America

Roughly, there are 900,000,000 acres of farmland in continental America, including crop, pasture and timberlands. Roughly, also, there are 30,000,000 persons living on farms which should include about 12,000,000 adults or 6,000,000 adult couples. The Department of Agriculture figures show there are over 6,000,000 farmers. Thus if all these farmers had equal sized farms out of the 900,000,000 acres, the average would be about 150 acres.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for August 23

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:5-17; Romans 1:15-17. GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Learns a Lesson. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Makes a Great Discovery.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—First Steps in World Brotherhood. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Universal Brotherhood in Christ.

Christianity early found its progress impeded by a difference of opinion. Such a difference when met in a Christian spirit will not be a stone of offense, but when properly and tactfully settled may be a stepping stone to progress.

Jewish Christians at Jerusalem were disturbed by the report that Peter had received the gentile Cornelius as a Christian brother without requiring him to fulfill the Jewish law of circumcision.

Peter defended his action not by asserting his position or appealing to his apostolic authority, but by relating what God had done. Henry Drummond once said, "The best argument for Christianity is a Christian." The best proof that God has actually been at work is to present the unanswerable evidence of a redeemed soul. In this manner his plea Peter reveals that

I. He Had a Vision of God's Purpose (vv. 5-10).

God had spoken to him. When we meet a man who is in touch with God, we should at once give heed. He may be, and perhaps should be, the minister or a Christian leader, but he may be and frequently is some humble, unknown servant of God. But if God has spoken to him we will do well to listen. Peter had learned the great lesson that what God had cleansed man should receive as clean.

II. He Had Seen God Work (vv. 11-15).

The Holy Spirit had fallen on the gentiles and they actually had been saved. Is it not singular that in the early church they could hardly believe that a gentile could be saved? Now we are astonished if a Jew is saved! Why will we in our unbelief limit the Holy One of Israel?

The all-powerful gospel of the grace of God is still saving men and women, Jews and gentiles, from their sins. Have you seen it happen? It is a great inspiration to faith and service. God is ready so to encourage us—he is the same today as he was when he sent Peter to Cornelius. Are we willing to run his errands, proclaim his message?

III. He Had Received a Fresh Insight Into God's Word (v. 16).

The best way to learn the meaning of God's Word is to use it, live it, obey it. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God" (John 7:17).

Peter had learned anew that God's Word meant just what it said. We who are his servants should believe his Word and act on it in faith.

IV. He Knew Better Than to Withstand God (v. 17).

When God has not raised any barriers of race, creed, color, class, or social position, it is not for his followers, and assuredly not for his servants, to build "fences" which he would not authorize or countenance.

One of the needs of our day is that those doing God's work should not withstand him and his will. He who is the same yesterday, today, and forever is ready to work as powerfully today as he did in the days of Finney and Moody, and in the days of Abraham, Moses, Daniel, and of Peter. Let us give him liberty to work in and through us, not as we may wish, but as he desires. Who are we that we should withstand God?

V. In Conclusion (Romans 1:15-17).

This portion presents a magnificent declaration from Peter's co-worker, Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation for everyone that believes, Jew or Greek. Regardless of race or condition, we are all unrighteous, and there is but one way of salvation—through faith in Jesus Christ. It is our responsibility and privilege to make this message known to all men everywhere. Your neighbor and mine, whether in the next house or on the other side of the world, is our opportunity. Not one is unclean or untouchable, although he may be stained with the dark pollution of sin. God is ready and willing to save. Let us tell men the good news!

Kindness

I shall pass through this world but once; any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human creature, let me do it now; let me not defer it, or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.—S. Grellet.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Just outside my window I can hear a slight clicking every time the members of my household turn on the taps in their kitchens. That clicking reminds me constantly that water is expensive down here in this seaside cottage where I am spending a month.

By and by, when I close the cottage a man with a key will come along, unlock a meter and take its reading.

Then just before I am leaving he will hand me a slip of paper which will inform me what I owe him.

These boys on the Maine coast are careful, as they should be, that no summer dweller gets away without making matters square with that meter.

One becomes acutely aware of the necessity for economy as the little counting device in the meter clicks off the pints, quarts, gallons and barrels that the families around here use.

And as the little machines click out their information I become impressed with the fact that time has a value of which I have been thinking too lightly.

Why would it not be a good plan to meter one's time in the same way?

If every minute, every hour clicked its message in my ears,

Caution and Courage

COURAGE is not a muscular but a moral virtue. A form of courage is to withstand public opinion. . . . Some men in these matters are always on the unpopular side, always in opposition to popular prejudices; not from crotchets or perversity, but because they see beyond their day, or discern dangers not as yet perceived, or have inherited truth of which others have been robbed. — Cardinal Manning.

A great mind is a generous one.

so that I would know just how much time I am using and just how much I am allowing to go to waste, it might be a good thing for my bank account—such as it is—and prompt me to put a check on the needless escape of the one thing with which we are all endowed while we live, namely, time.

When one learns to budget that time to devote a part of it to work and a part of it to play, he is, or ought to be on the way to an intelligent control of life—which, as far as you and I are concerned, is the time allotted to us from our birth on to our disappearance from the planet.

It would help almost everybody to note now and then how the years are passing, what we are doing with them, and what we are getting out of them as they come and go.

As the poet observes of the minutes, "we cannot strive to grasp them all," but we can grasp and hold many more than we do if we remember that every click of that meter means a second used or lost forever.

What our time allowance is we shall have no means of knowing.

But we can if we are careful get more out of existence as it passes than we usually do.

So, when you hear that meter spinning in the cellar, or the clock ticking on the wall, you will realize that your life is being slowly measured out to you.

Keep as careful track of it as you are able to.

Get as much out of every working hour—and every playing hour as it is possible, and when it is all over you will know that you have made the best possible use of a life which you might, by heedlessness, have wantonly squandered.
